Water Environment Federation

Odor complaints are on the rise as ongoing residential and commercial developments in our cities bring more and more people within close proximity to wastewater collection systems and treatment plants, and as this development spurs the expansion of collection and treatment facilities to handle ever-increasing capacity needs. This book is a collection of papers presented at the WEFTEC 2000 Odor and Corrosion workshop. By collecting the presentations made by the leading experts in this discipline—including presentations on odor and corrosion control in wastewater systems. The information in this book should be of interest and value to all collection systems.
