Dr. Lever suggests that this albuminous state of the urine, the common state predisposing to puerperal convulsions, is produced by pressure of the enlarged uterus upon the renal veins. If this were the explanation, this complication should occur as frequently in subsequent as in first labours, because the renal veins are not more especially compressed in the one than in the other. But to discuss any such question at present would be wandering from our subject. We have said enough to show that, in regard to puerperal convulsions and their frequency in first labours, we must take other points into consideration than the mere degree of obstruction, in order to account for their high over-proportion in first pregnancies. Before we proceed farther, let us pause for a minute, and simply recapitulate the reasons that we have already given for considering the greater size of the head of the male child as the cause of the greater number of complications and casualties connected with male births. First, I have shown that for the very marked differences existing between the difficulties and perils of male, as compared with female births, there is no other traceable cause, in the mechanism of parturition, than the larger size of the head of the male child. We have seen, Secondly, that an increase in the morbid effects may be proved to be connected with an increase in this reputed morbid cause Thirdly, that when the alleged cause is diminished, the effects are diminished and Fourthly, that in those morbid complications in labour in which the cause is in abeyance, the effect is also absent. Lastly, we have found that similar effects upon both mother and child are produced by other causes which are similar in their character and amount. Now, if in conduc...
